Personal Statement

Being a beauty therapist is not something I feel you can just train in. Being caring and passionate about everything you do is what makes someone a great therapist and it cannot be forced.

I love being around people and making them feel good about themselves. It is an amazing industry to be in as you get to make feel confident and glowing with every treatment.

In February 2012 I climbed Mount Kilimanjaro for cancer research, raising over £7,000 which was the best week of my life. That week has really enhanced a lot of my qualities and it is an achievement I will always be proud of.

I trained with Decleor in my first term of university, learning the time precious facial: using aromessences for a pressure point facial and baums for a drainage massage.

In October Decleor came back to train us in the advanced facial: this started with a back massage to relax the client, followed by a back and face analysis, where areas of congestion or redness would show problems in different organs of the body.

September 2010 Spa Find

Spa Find came in to train us in their body and face treatment. I was trained in their facial using their mineral products and then their back treatment consisting of a back exfoliation, a massage and then a mud mask.

Hobbies and Interests

December 2012 - May 2013 I worked in the French alps as a mobile beauty therapist for the ski season. This was an amazing experience, allowing me to continue doing the work I love but also learn new skills, such as snowboarding.

I have been horse riding since the age of 3 and I used to have a horse but sadly it got sold. I try and ride as regularly as possible but it is an expensive hobby.
